

Do the 1100 series, the 2100 series, and the 3100 series phones act as computer hubs?

Written by Tom Adkins

Sunday, 21 January 2007 12:48 -

All three series phones act as hubs. Each has an RJ 45 jack installed on the rear platform, for connectivity. A computer can be added, via this hub port, as needed. The major difference is in the speed per jack. Most are 10/100 hubs, which covers the majority of access needs at the desk top. The 3103 manager's phone has a one gig hub, for extraordinary speed or bandwidth requirements.